Truckers' Leader 'No Patsy'

By NEIL GILBRIDE
WASHINGTON (AP) —
Teamsters Vice President
Frank Fitzsimmons slid into the chair of imprisoned union chief James R. Hoffa yesterday to confront the nation's trucking industry across the bargaining table.

"They'll find Fitzsimmons is no 'Patsy,'" a Teamsters source said in predicting the contract talks for some 500,000 truckers would get quickly back on the road.

The talks, with a March 31 strike deadline, bogged down when Trucking Employers Inc. refused to continue bargaining until after Hoffa's status had been settled. Hoffa entered a prison cell yesterday to serve an eight-year term for jury tampering.

Fitzsimmons, whom Hoffa had picked to run the union for him, got quickly down to business with industry negotiators, declining to let photographers or newsmen witness the resumption of talks.

"Fitzsimmons is in the chair-man's seat," a Teamsters' spokesman said.

While Hoffa's absence left an obvious void in the union heran for 10 colorful and controversial years, the union pointed out that Fitzsimmons was no newcomer to labor negotiations.

"He settled the last big strike we had, and Hoffa sent him in to do it," a spokesman said of a 1956 Canadian strike involving 8,500 Ontario teamsters.

eral Prison in Lewisburg, Pa.,

Powell's Lawyers File Suit in District Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adam Clayton Powell's attorneys filed suit in U.S. District Court yesterday to force the House to seat the Harlem Democrat, expelled a week ago for misusing government funds.

The suit, charging that Powell's constitutional rights had been violated, asked a preliminary injunction so that Powell could take his seat immediately, and a permanent injunction restraining House Speaker John W. McCormack from refusing to administer the oath of office to him. It requested that a three-judge panel hear the case as soon as possible.

Even as his attorneys moved to overthrow the House action, Powell began to gather support in the April 11 special election for the seat he has held 22 years.

TO COUNTYS, CITIES

Seek Extension Of One-Vote Rule

By BARRY SCHWEID
WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government asked the Supreme Court yesterday to extend the one-man, one-vote doctrine to county and city government throughout the country.

Because of "malapportionment" at the local level, millions of Americans are denied full and effective participation in local government, U.S. Solicitor General Thurgood Marshall told the court.

"It is the position of the United States that, as a matter of constitutional principle, logic and sound policy, the principles of Reynolds apply to local governmental bodies whose members are elected from districts and require that those districts be substantially equal in population," Marshall said in a memorandum.

In the 1964 Reynolds decision, the Supreme Court ruled that both houses of state legislatures must be based on districts that are substantially equal in population.

The high court also has held U.S. congressional districts must be based on this one-man, one-vote principle.

These decisions have effected a revolutionary change in congressional and state legislative representation. In the main, they have given city voters a larger voice in government.

Last December the Supreme Court agreed to take on three cases that question extension of one man, one vote to county government and county school boards. In January the court agreed to hear a fourth case that involved possible application to city government.

The federal government made its position known in a "friend of the court" brief in a fifth case. The court has yet to announce whether this case will be heard.

UAW Takes Control Of Rebellious Local At Mansfield Plant

By FELIX B. WOLD
DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers union chieftains yesterday declared an administrator in charge of a rebellious Ohio local, but the local's membership flouted the order and voted to strike a key General Motors parts plant.

The revolt against the UAW's high command — including President Walter P. Reuther — followed by 16 days a similar strike that led to a crippling of GM auto production across the nation with more than 200,000 layoffs in 86 plants, GM said the layoffs were necessary because of parts shortages.

A UAW spokesman said the action by Local 549 in mansfield, Ohio, had no standing because the meeting was not called by anyone who had authority call it.

"It was an illegal meeting,"
the UAW said.

A spokesman for GM declined to discuss what steps they might take against Local 549 members who failed to end the strike, the union already had warned that its April convention would consider filing charges against persons who "knowingly and willfully fomented and prolonged these illegal and unauthorized strikes."

Local 549 officers were summoned to Detroit to meet with the UAW in arriving at the ad-ministratorship decision, but Petty refused to obey the summons.

He called, instead, for the membership meeting of the local which led to the vote to continue the strike.

The UAW's executive board took its extraordinary action as Reuther accused the rebel leaders of intimidation against other members of the local.

Communist Force Hits U.S. Infantry

By JOHN CANTWELL

SAIGON (AP) — A Communist force crashed into a U.S.
infantry platoon position, hurling hand grenades and sac-chell charges early today and inflicting heavy casualties.

U.S. military headquarters reported 38 American casualties in the close-quarter fighting. An infantry platoon normally numbers about 45 men.

Headquarters said 10 American soldiers were killed, 25 were wounded and three more are missing. The fighting took place in early morning darkness in a coastal area northwest of Tuy Hoa and about 240 miles northwest of Saigon.

The Communist force, an unknown size, penetrated a position of a platoon of the U.S. 4th Infantry Division. After 32 minutes of fierce fighting, contact was broken, a spokesman said. In the meantime, a U.S. armored reaction force had been called up as reinforcements and, en route to the battle scene, the mechanized column hit two land mines. Damage to vehicles—presumably armored personnel carriers—was not reported.

Headquarters said the mechanized reinforcements reached the battle scene at 3:35 a.m., about two hours after contact was broken with the enemy.

There were no reports to indicate whether fighting was resumed or any estimate on Communist losses.

Elsewhere, only small and scattered ground fighting was reported Thursday and U.S. air strikes over North Vietnam were hampered once more by the continued bad weather.

The U.S. Command reported an Army helicopter was forced down by enemy ground fire in war Zone C where the big American drive, Operation
Junction City, was under way.

The helicopter went down 30 miles northwest of Tay Ninh
City and a spokesman said there were no American casualties.

B52 bombers staged three raids in South Vietnam last night

Reuther claimed that a "very small and insignificant minority" was responsible for the latest troubles. He said the general membership of the local does not support the group.

About 1,000 of the local's 2-600 members did not attend the membership meeting. Some 500 of them were on duty at the plant the local voted to strike.

As the new walkout hit, GM was just getting back to full normal production.

Local Defiant; Begins Strike

By ROBERT E. MILLER

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP)—Rebellious workers at a key parts plant in General Motors' vast auto-making system defied the United Auto Workers International Executive Board and launched a full-blown strike again last night.

Shortly after the UAW in Detroit had announced it was taking over the local here, a mass "unauthorized" meeting went on as scheduled and resulted in a vote to strike again.

The strike was declared for last night's 11:30 shift, and only about 30 of the 300 production workers on that shift went to work.

About 100 workers milled outside the plant. They didn't carry picket signs, but a leader had said earlier, "I'm not so sure we'll need pickets. Our men just won't go to work."

A couple of dozen sheriff's and suburban Ontario police cars with helmeted officers patrolled the area as the dissidents made good their threat.

About 1,500 members of UAW Local 549 met while some 500 of a scheduled 1,000 were on the job during the second shift, and the strike vote "was unanimous," according to maverick officer Frank Petty.

"All I can tell you is we decided we're not going to go to work," Petty told newsmen.

Regarding the takeover announced by UAW President Walter P. Reuther in Detroit less than an hour before the meeting here, Petty declared: "They'll take over in name only."

Reuther and other board members had called for a prompt return to work at the Fisher Body Division plant here, where the UAW ordered a strike ended just two weeks ago.

Petty, union shop committee chairman at the Fisher plant, is among five Local 549 members, including three officers, who contend the company plans to fire them. Rumors to this effect touched off picketing and a partial stoppage this week.

He said the strike would be effective with the third shift scheduled at 11:30 Wednesday night.

GM laid off workers all over the country during and after last month's strike, blaming a shortage of parts produced here.

Petty said last night he and his fellow dissidents believed Reuther was going back on what the local officer said was a "promise we'd get our jobs back." They moved even while the local president and other officers were in Detroit on international orders to explain the latest trouble.

Willis Marcum, president of the Mansfield Industrial and Trades Council, AFL-CIO, said a main trouble is that the local is "fed up" with the international union.

"We paid $600,000 in dues in the past eight years and never got any backing," Marcum said.

The meeting last night—in the rented building of International Union of Electrical Workers—"was strictly Mr. Petty's meeting," Marcum added.

"And he has been honored by a turnout of a majority of the members," Marcum said.

Local 549 represents 2,660 workers.

'Confidential Informant' May Appear at Hearing

By JACK OWENS

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A state judge indicated yesterday Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison may have to produce his unnamed "confidential informant" at a preliminary hearing Tuesday for Clay L. Shaw, who was booked on a charge of conspiracy in the Kennedy assassination.

"It is my inclination now that the identity of the informant will have to be disclosed at the hearing," Criminal Dist. Judge Bernard Bagert said at the conclusion of a hearing in which he refused to dismiss the case for lack of jurisdiction.

Bagert said he would rule
Tuesday on the defense request that the informant be identified.

Shaw, 54, former managing director of the International Trade Mart here, calmly chat-ed with his lawyers and other persons in the small courtroom yesterday.

The district attorney arrested
Shaw March 1 and booked him on a murder conspiracy charge in connection with Garrison's five-month investigation of the
Nov. 22, 1963, assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

In an application for a warrant to search Shaw's home, the district attorney alleged that Shaw, Lee Harvey Oswald, David W. Ferrie and other persons met at Ferrie's apartment here in September 1963 and agreed
"to kill John F. Kennedy."

Present at these secret meetings, said Garrison, was "a confidential informant" who saw the conspirators and heard the plans. "The informant was questioned while under the influence of 'truth serum,'" the district attorney's office said.

In asking that Garrison be directed to produce the informant, Guy Johnson, one of Shaw's lawyers, argued: "My client is entitled to be faced by his accusers."

Following the hearing, Al Oser, an assistant district attorney, was asked about the defense request that the informant be produced. "They will get everything they ask for Tuesday," he said.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Warren Historical Society Given National Merit Award

By FRANKLIN R. HOFF

A grand conjunction of historical luminaries of Pennsylvania were gathered to commemorate a historic occasion last night when the Warren County Historical Society was officially presented with the Award of Merit of the American Society for State and Local History.

Dr. S. K. Stevens, executive director of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, Harrisburg, who made the presentation of the certificate of award to Warren County Historical Society president T. Kenneth Stratton, was introduced by James B. Stevenson, of Titusville, chairman of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission. Also participating were Donald H. Kent, director bureau of archives and history of the commission; Jack Todd Ericson, assistant manuscript curator, division of archives and manuscripts of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin; and Warren's distinguished historian of the petroleum industry, and newly elected president of the Warren County Historical Society, Ernest C. Miller.

Following the election of officers and directors, a brief report of the year's activities was given by secretary Mrs. Keith E. Chase.

Dr. Stevens presented a slide talk about "Historic Properties in Pennsylvania."

ERNEST C. MILLER

Ericson, working this week as a consultant for the local historical society, paid high compliments to the society for its accomplishments.

In presenting the coveted Award of Merit, Dr. Stevens emphasized that this was an outstanding achievement for the Warren County Historical Society to be awarded this honor. "The American Association of State and Local Historical Societies," he explained, "represents both the United States and Canada, and presents no more than 40 awards each year in the entire 50 states and all the provinces of Canada."

The citation reads: "For a remarkable program to recruit and train volunteers for historical society work, and for leadership in historical activities in Northwestern Pennsylvania."

In accepting the award on behalf of the society, outgoing president T. K. Stratton emphasized that many people have contributed their talents and energies to make it possible to receive the honor.

Officers elected at the annual meeting were, in addition to President Miller: vice-president, William F. Clinger Jr., secretary, Mrs. Keith E. Chase, treasurer, W. Beyer Africa, archivist, Mrs. Frances Ramsey, associate archivist, Mrs. Richard Corcoran, librarian, Miss Catharine Henderson and editor, W. Floyd Clinger.

Directors are: Kenneth Barrett, Dr. William Cashman, Mrs. Philip Coyle, Donald Dalrymple, Joseph DeFrees, R. Pierson Eaton, the Hon. Alexander C. Flick Jr., Henry Fuellhart, Mrs. Alfred Grant, Franklin R. Hoff, Mrs. Robert Israel, Ralph Odell, Harold C. Putnam, Bruce Smith and Stratton.

Dr. Stevens discussed the various important historic properties that had over many decades been acquired by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to conserve and preserve. Many have been restored. A number have been reconstructed. One of the outstanding of these is the Drake Well Park and museum near Titusville. Others are Pensbury Manor, the home of William Penn; the Daniel Boone homestead; Ephrata Cloister; Corwall Furnace; the home of the famed scientist who discovered oxygen, Joseph Priestley, and other sites and structures.

Stevens considers the Drake Well Museum as being perhaps the finest small museum devoted to any American industry in any part of the country.

Ericson described the work being done at the Warren County Historical Society this week, in cataloging and arranging valuable historical collections, such as the Frank Miller collection which extends from 1802 to the late 1930's. "I am extremely impressed by the quantity and the great historical importance of the records the Warren County Historical Society has collected in the few years the society has been in existence. I think Warren County is tops in getting good collections and making them available to researchers."

GM's "farming out" of Mansfield work to Detroit. That strike ended on orders of the international.

Reuther accused Petty of "deliberate falsehood" and an effort to "confuse and mislead" members of the local.

The UAW chief said Petty falsely stated that "Reuther made a commitment" that there would be no discharges by GM at Mansfield. GM fired or suspended five men who refused to do certain work in the first strike.

Penalties provided by the UAW constitution range from reprimands or fines to expulsion from the union.

Community Action Group Forms at Clarendon

First community action meeting at Clarendon sponsored by the local Office of Economic Opportunity was held in Lincoln Elementary School last night.

Local citizens were informed by the Economic Opportunities Council office on goals, purposes and programs that are available to the public through the Economic Opportunity Act. Office programs are designed to help low-income families but are not to be confused with public assistance type programs or "give away" programs.

The programs are designed for people who are willing to exert personal effort for themselves said Richard Brown, head of the EOC.

The council, which is organized to implement Warren and Forest counties with programs of the Economic Act, is currently in the middle of a drive touching 12 sites, nine of which are in Warren County.

The council, which is a non-profit corporation, said last night that response was good at the Clarendon target area that included Stoneham, Clarendon, Tiona, Weldbank, Mead township and Kinzua township.

Citizens elected Tony L. Norton as chairman for the next meeting; Mrs. Lorraine Dennis, vice president; and Ralph Rapp, master of the Diamond

Truckers

Tuesday, said "I hope to return" to the Teamsters, meanwhile entrusting his "life's dream" national trucking contract to Fitzsimmons.

The union is asking a three-year renewal of the master contract covering some 12,000 companies which Hotta first negotiated three years ago.

The union's demands include 75 cents an hour in pay raises over the three years, plus numerous improvements in fringe benefits that add up to an estimated total of five to seven per cent a year.

'Doth Thou Protest'

EDINBORO, Pa. (AP) — About 200 Edinboro State College young men marched around a freshmen girls' dormitory singing the National Anthem last night after college officials restricted the girls to the dorm.

State and borough police were called in shortly after the hour-long demonstration started, but police described the incident as peaceful.

Dr. William Cornell, director of student personnel, said 350 girls in Scot Hall were confined for the night because of a false fire alarm and slight damage to a lounge earlier in the week.

Two Gas Lines Under River

The Pennsylvania Gas Company of Warren has made application to construct two gas pipe lines under the Allegheny River near Irvine, Pennsylvania, it is announced by the Corps of Engineers.

The proposed crossings consist of a 12-inch and a 20-inch pipe line crossing at approximately right angle to the river with a minimum cover of four feet.

Interested parties are invited to state any objections they may have to the proposed work from the standpoint of navigation. Statements should be received at the office of the engineers at Pittsburgh by March 27.

New Road Policy Is Commended

ERIE — Because highway construction in Pennsylvania is no longer decided by political expedience, Northwestern Pennsylvania is getting a fairer shake in its road needs.

This was pointed out by Harold Reslink, member of the government's Highways Commission Tuesday night when he spoke of the area's past and future concerning highway construction.

His talk was before officials of Millcreek, Harborside, Greene, Summit, McKean and Fairview townships in a meeting held in the Millcreek Township Municipal Building.

The switch from political expedience to a fairer treatment of the Erie area, Reslink said, is due mostly to the efforts of three men—former Governor George Leader "who recreated an interest in highways; former Highways Secretary Park Martin "who gave the department stability with the introduction of civil service, seniority and brought about better pay" and former Governor William Scranton "who was dedicated to a continuity of highway construction."

Funds Granted For Practical Nurse Training

Pennsylvania received $98,878 in federal funds yesterday for a project designed to train 30 persons for jobs in the "Licensed Practical Nurse" classification, the State Labor and Industry Department's Bureau of Employment Security and the State Department of Public Instruction announced.

Application for this program under the Manpower Development and Training Act was made by the Harrisburg Local Office of Pennsylvania's Bureau of Employment Security and was approved earlier by the U.S. Department of Labor and the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare "subject to the availability of funds."

Harrisburg City School District will give this 52-week course in the Dr. Keen Building, Harrisburg. Trainees will attend sessions 35 hours a week during the pre-clinical period and 40 hours a week during the clinical training. Included in the $98,878 federal project allocation is $73,650 in trainees' allowances with $9,100 of the latter amount earmarked for subsistence and another $6,050 of the same amount set aside for transportation expenses.

A 'Will' an Important Paper

In handing down a decision in Orphan's Court this week Judge Alexander C. Flick Jr., in discussing a question over a will written by the individual—said "... it involved the unhappy situation which always arises when someone decides to make a will and proceeds without benefit of counsel. Such illusory economy results not only in excessive litigation but also in the frustration of the testator's intentions."

His advice should be heeded by all. Everyday of the year nearly $15 million in cash and other assets is left by people who die without wills. Most of this money will be tied up in state probate courts for years.

Are you sure your property will be passed on promptly to those who want to receive it? Spare your heirs headaches. Here are some tips about handling your estate:

Have a will drawn up by a lawyer and keep it up to date. Most of the costs and losses in estates stem from attempts by layman at doing the job themselves. Estate planning is terribly complex, even for people with ordinary means. The best advice is to pay the $25-$50 average cost for competent supervision.

Consider the tax advantages of giving away property while alive. You can give as much as $3,000 a year to as many persons as you like without paying a gift tax. Examine trusts as a way to gain maximum flexibility, accomplish special purposes and avoid some delays of probate.

Never ask a friend or neighbor to be an executor if your estate is sizable. Best bet, a bank, trust company or financial specialist. Be certain that your will provides for guardianship of minor children or for those who may be incompetent to manage for themselves.

Following these guidelines—and making sure your spouse does the same—will protect your estate against high taxes and other costs and minimize the delay of probate.

Aided With Draft Deferments

WASHINGTON — It has now leaked out that the Central Intelligence Agency used not only cash under the table but draft deferments to subvert the National Student Association.

The threat of the draft hung heavily over the heads of NSA officers, according to their own admissions behind closed doors, unless they followed the CIA line in their student activities.

The CIA would send an NSA representative to Vietnam, for example, and expect him on his return to oppose the anti-war movement on the campuses.

The draft deferments were obtained through CIA-White House channels until last year when Vice President Humphrey's office made the arrangements.

All this is revealed in detailed, handwritten notes, made available to us, of the NSA's secret staff meetings. The notes were kept by educational director Larry Rubin, who is resigning in protest over NSA's failure to make a clean breast of the CIA affair.

Ed Schwartz, the vice president in charge of national affairs, brought up the draft question at a staff meeting attended by 30 people on February 9. This was five days before the NSA-CIA controversy hit the headlines. However, the officers knew Ramparts magazine was coming out with the story and were discussing what to do about it.

"You must understand our bind," said Schwartz. "It is clear now that the CIA has gotten our draft deferments for us in the past. If we blast the CIA in our statements, we will lose our deferments. We can't have an organization without a staff, and we can't have a staff without deferments."

"I thought you said the CIA did NOT get our deferments for us this year," interrupted Rubin.

"Yes," acknowledged Schwartz, "Phil Sherman (last year's NSA president) worked it out with Hubert Humphrey, but our information tells us that if we blast the CIA, we'll still lose our deferments."

Schwartz then produced a proposed press statement that admitted next to nothing about the CIA link.

"Dammit, Ed," protested Al Milano, head of the Student Government Information Service, "every staff member said we should directly admit to the relationship."

"We're lying," agreed Rubin. "We do know the relationship existed."

Schwartz, noting that some of the deferred staff members were not present, argued: "How can we make decisions that will affect their future?" At the same meeting, he also confided that the CIA had given up to $5,000, plus credit cards and free travel, to NSA's foreign representatives.

"I used to wonder why the international people lived so high," he said. "Now I know." He added ruefully that "the CIA doesn't exactly force the caviar down our people's throats."

Four days later Eugene Groves, NSA president, returned from a hurried European trip. "Don't worry, boys," he reassured the staff at a February 13 meeting. "We'll all save our draft exemptions. I'm working it out with some people."

Groves disclosed that he had been "in communication" with Under-Secretary of State Nicholas Katzenbach. There was a "possibility," Groves said, the CIA might be persuaded to make a public admission that it had financed NSA. However, he warned this would mean they could not tell the "whole truth" to the press.

"The staff agreed that no matter what," broke in Rubin from the back of the room, "we want to tell the whole truth."

Then he demanded of Groves: "First, I want to say this to your face: Why did you lie to us about your own knowledge?"

"We had to get Pulvers (NSA representative Roger Pulvers) out of Poland," replied Groves, "before any word was spread that he was CIA-trained."

"Ed (Schwartz) said we had to lie to protect our money," retorted Rubin. "I want to know about our present complicity."

"Wait, Gene!" broke in Milano. "You've lied to us. We don't want that kind of crap any more. Groves buried his head in his hands."

"Look," he pleaded, "I really don't know what to say, I won't apologize."

NSA's top officers continued to huddle with the CIA throughout the controversy while they put out statements claiming only incidental ties to the CIA. Indeed, the statements were prepared at the secret meetings which were held at the Marriott Motel and the home of CIA agent Robert Kiley, both in Washington.

When Rubin resigned of these meetings, he threatened to resign. Schwartz on February 27 called Rubin into his CIA-carpeted, CIA-furnished office.

"You're a moral puritan, which now makes you a moral pervert," snapped Schwartz. He warned that Rubin's demand for full public disclosure could end up causing NSA staff members to die in Vietnam.

"If keeping the CIA meeting secret means I'll save one person's deferment," he added, "I'll keep those meetings secret."

"Let me be punished; let the full force of this House crash down on my head; and then let me dwell in the House of Representatives forever and ever."

"Adam Clayton Powell, this body is impressed by your humility and we want to do everything we can to make your punishment as light as possible."

"Ah beg to differ with you, suh, but ah think ah should get the full treatment. What ah have done is unforgivable. If you show me mercy then ah will not feel ah have been forgiven. You must purge me of my guilt, for only then will ah be able to shave and look at mahself in the morning."

"What should we do with you, Adam?"

"Let me pick a bale of cotton, lick a bale a day."

"That would be too harsh."

"Ah could tote a bale and lift a bale and if ah got a lil' drunk ah could land in jail!"

"I don't think that would be constitutional."

"But you don't understand, suh. Mah heart is weary and ah'm sick of tryin'. Ah'm tired of livin' and 'feared of dyin'."

"Sing it, Adam."

"But ole man river, he just keeps rollin' along."

"As you can see, Adam, there isn't a dry eye in the House. We're going to let you take your seat, because we're a forgiving people in this body, and when we see a man as humble as you, we can only say 'go forth, brother, and sin no more.'"

"Thank you, boss. Ah'll jes go and take mah seat in the back."

JAMES RESTON

The Un-Answered Questions

By JAMES RESTON
(c) N. Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — The debate on Vietnam is getting noisier and sillier because almost all the principals keep arguing about mysterious proposals and "ultimatums" that have never been put on the public record.

For example, Secretary of State Rusk said the other day that "proposals substantially similar to those put forward by Senator (Robert) Kennedy were explored prior, during, and after the Tet truce—all without result."

But he did not say what the proposals were or who they were presented to, and even members of the Foreign Relations Committee have not been able to get private information on this critically important point.

Since then Premier Aleksei N. Kosygin of the Soviet Union has condemned the United States for rejecting what he called "an extremely important peace initiative" from Hanoi.

This, supposedly referred to what Kosygin had earlier described as an offer from the North Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh, namely, "that the United States immediately and unconditionally cease the bombings of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (North Vietnam) and then the way would be cleared to the negotiating table for a discussion of all questions."

Obviously, no sensible discussion can be carried on with diplomatic smoke signals like these. This is a debate about phantoms rather than facts, and is beginning to sound more like an exercise in propaganda rather than diplomacy.

The Communists do not usually show their proposals across the world when they are serious about opening up a new and hopeful line of negotiations. This, at least, is Washington's experience with them in the past.

Nevertheless, it is still not clear why the Johnson administration does not explain, at least in private, to senators who are puzzled by all these charges and countercharges, just what we did propose, and to whom, and what response we got. The administration knew for weeks that Kennedy was going to make a major speech on Vietnam policy and had a fairly good idea of what he was going to say. Yet nobody told him before he spoke that the administration had put "substantially similar" proposals to Hanoi, and he is still not satisfied on the point.

The result is that the debate is smothered in suspicion. From some U. S. officials and sources other than our own government, one is told that Washington did shift its policy: That is to say, it did insist on de-escalation on both sides whereas last year it was willing to stop the bombing if Hanoi would merely start talking; that it did ask what Hanoi meant by unconditional cessation of bombing and was told this meant the bombing must stop and any qualification about starting it up again would be a "condition" and therefore an "ultimatum," unacceptable to Hanoi.

If this is true, the mystifying "clarifications" out of the state department are not very helpful. Washington is perfectly entitled to ask what Hanoi means by "the unconditional cessation of the United States bombing and all other acts of war against North Vietnam." Is a U. S. attack on a North Vietnamese regiment in South Vietnam an attack on "North Vietnam?"

Can North Vietnam demand the end of U. S. bombing and then insist that a request for some de-escalation on the Communist side is an "ultimatum?" Is North Vietnam really ready for a negotiated settlement or merely for talks which would relieve the pressure on North Vietnam and continue it on South Vietnam?

In a dispatch to the New York Times published Feb. 15, last, I said that certain officials of the United States government were former officials of the National Student Association and knew about the N.S.A.'s financial help from the Central Intelligence Agency.

I regret that I included in this list Ralph A. Dungan, present U. S. ambassador to Chile, and Robert S. Smith, special assistant to the director of the Agency for International Development. This was inaccurate. Both men were N.S.A. officials, not during the N.S.A.'s connection with the N.S.A., but before the intelligence agency provided any funds for the N.S.A.

I am sorry for this error, which has been used by the Communists to embarrass Dungan, who is one of our most competent ambassadors.

'Legislative Piecemeal-ism'

HARRISBURG—Two bills on the calendar of the House of Representatives point up what might be termed a growing trend in "legislative piecemeal-ism."

The two bills in question would transfer the issuance of fishing and hunting licenses from the State Department of Revenue to the State Fish Commission and the State Game Commission.

Unquestionably the sponsors of the two bills had every high ideal in mind in having the bills drafted—namely that of expediting the issuance of the two licenses.

But the issue actually goes far deeper than the licenses themselves and their habitually tardy issuances.

What prompted the two bills is this: It seems that each year the Department of Revenue, into whose net falls the responsibility for issuance of licenses of all types from which some sort of revenue is derived, falls way behind when it comes to preparation and issuance of these two particular types of licenses.

Talking about county commissioner candidates, there are more than 30 of them down in Allegheny ... We'll be seein' you.

Why of course—the two commissions issue their own licenses, eliminating the Department of Revenue ... Thus the two bills are introduced, most certainly in good faith and good intent.

But is this the answer? What is the reason, after all, for the existence of the Department of Revenue—other than to handle revenue-producing chores, the processing thereof, etc.?

If the hunting and fishing license issuing programs are to be removed from the department—shouldn't also the issuance of dog licenses, license plates for automobiles, trucks, buses, taxicabs, motorcycles et al, to say nothing of motor vehicle operator licenses, etc., etc.?

Or, what happens if a few years from now the Fish and Game Commission pops out on the license issuing bit, is this chore then to be handed back to the Department of Revenue which by then may have become quite proficient?

In this particular instance it would seem that some heavy knuckle-rapping is in order in the Department of Revenue to insure proper and timely issuance of the hunting and fishing licenses—rather than trying to remove a function that by type rightfully belongs in the department.

SYLVIA PORTER

Favor Working Wives

You, Mr. American husband of a college graduate, are among the overwhelming majority in your category if you approve of your wife working or if you answer the question with a shrug and "It's up to her." A full 56 per cent of husbands of college graduates have a favorable attitude toward their wives' employment and another 26 per cent are neutral on the subject.

You, sir, are becoming an anachronism, a stodgy leftover of a near-dead era, if you disapprove of your wife holding a job. Only 1 per cent of husbands of college graduates, less than one in five, oppose their wives' employment.

If your college graduate wife is now working, your attitude is even more favorable. More than 9 in 10 of these husbands openly approve of or are neutral about their wives' employment. Only a tiny 4 per cent do not approve of their wives being in the labor force.

Most significant, your attitude is not changed by the fact that you and your working wife have children. The number of husbands disapproving of their wives' employment under these circumstances remains at 4 per cent.

These are among the provocative findings of a study of "College Women Seven Years After Graduation," made by the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department. The highlighted finding of the survey was that 51 per cent of the graduates are still in the labor force—at a time when they "are near the peak of their childbearing and family responsibilities."

But tucked into the back tables of the report are the even more fascinating aspects about the attitudes of husbands. In the words of Mrs. Mary Dublin Keyserling, director of the Women's Bureau, "the overall response reflects the changing attitude of society in favor of the employment of married women."

Important as this point is, the implications in my mind go far beyond it. To me, the response signals a widespread, positive acceptance by men of the educated wife and mother as an individual who needs to maintain her own identity in the world outside the home and who should be actively encouraged to do so. It reflects a marked decline in the age-old prejudices against the working wife and mother.

It warns that the time may be coming when the woman who marries and retires permanently from the work force may undermine instead of enhance her husband's regard. The individual answers of the women also suggest clearly that the husband who approves of his wife's employment is treated more than the one who does not.

All of this, of course, is loaded with economic meaning to employers in particular and our society in general.

To employers, this woman college graduate represents a great untapped pool of trained, increasingly scarce workers. But the employer must recognize the existence of this pool. He also must adjust his traditional work hours to take advantage of the skills of the educated wife who cannot work full-time but who could be a superbly valuable part-time worker.

To our economy in general, this woman's employment is assurance that more and more American families will move into the middle and upper-income brackets—and will have increasing amounts of money to spend on non-essentials. Her work-away-from-home makes it certain that the trends toward eating-out and toward use of easy-to-prepare foods at home will continue and intensify. The same goes for spending on clothes: obviously the working wife needs a bigger and more varied wardrobe than the non-working wife.

The working wife, particularly the college-educated wife, is now commonplace and she will become more so. But we are just starting to probe the extent to which she is changing our social-economic lives and attitudes.

A Day For Dorothy

By FRANCES E. LESLIE

Private Teacher of New York City

As the lady talked, I tried to concentrate on the beautiful room around us instead of her words. For she was telling me about Dorothy, her 8-year-old daughter, the middle one of her five children, a mentally retarded child.

"She's never spoken a single word," the mother repeated. "The doctors say it's hopeless. We took her up to Boston last year and..."

I fixed my thoughts on the green damask draperies framing tall windows that looked out on Park Avenue. How handsome the whole room was, with its crystal chandeliers, its concert-grand piano, its fresh flowers everywhere.

What a lovely woman the mother was, an opera singer whose name I had known even before her letter came asking me if I would consider a job with Dorothy.

Yes, a lovely woman—and especially in her love for this little girl whom all the experts said should be put away. The love was the thing to concentrate on.

And so while pretending to listen, I closed my ears to the results of reflex texts and encephalograms. In my years of working with retarded children I had discovered that my attention must not go to the lacks but to the special strengths in such children.

That there was strength in each of them I was sure. I believe that a little of God lives in every one of us, and that to bring it out is the only job of any teacher.

Dorothy and I met the next weekend. With me it was love at first sight: this beautiful, blonde, blue-eyed child—surely a very lovely person lived in such a form. For her part, Dorothy only stared at me with inscrutable eyes.

"It's one of her quiet days, thank heaven," her mother said. "On her wild ones, there's no controlling her."

My mind considered those wild days. I liked the sound of them. They told me there was a person here—trapped in whatever chemical or physical prison—but an individual struggling to be seen and recognized. I told her mother I would try the job for a month.

Dorothy's problem everywhere, it seemed to me, was the non-expectation of everyone around her. I remember breakfast one morning when the other four children and their nurse had come into town. The others quickly finished their cereal but Dorothy, dazzled by the activity around her, hadn't touched hers.

"Just spoon it into her!" the nurse cried impatiently. "She can eat by herself," I said. "I guess she's just too interested in what's going on."

"Interested?" Nurse gave a snort of contempt. "She doesn't have any more idea what's happening than that canary." It was so easy to assume that because she had no words she had no understanding either.

I understood the problem. It is difficult to keep on talking to someone when there is never an answering voice. I felt it most during our daily walk in Central Park. Dorothy and I spent hours just walking. When the silence threatened to absorb us both, I sang.

I started with the hymns I remembered from my own childhood back in England. Dorothy seemed to like the songs, for her feet marched in time to the music and her head nodded rhythmically.

We also brought sketch pads and crayons to the park. I was fascinated by some drawings I had found in Dorothy's room, a pattern of graceful waving lines, drawn over and over again. What it meant I had no idea, but it certainly wasn't "scribble" as Nurse impatiently called it.

And so we would sit on a park bench and sketch. I drew trees and strolling people and the lofty skyline beyond the park, and Dorothy drew pigeons.

I saw the very first time what they were, not perhaps the outside of pigeons like other people draw, but the soul of the birds instead, the very way it feels to be a pigeon. Faster than my eyes could follow, her hand moved: the wings in flight, the thrust of the neck, the self-important walk.

"On Lord," I prayed silently, "what a lovely glimpse of Yourself You have given me today!"

One day Dorothy sat on the piano bench beside me as I sang the songs I had sung in the park.

Halfway through a joyous song the miracle happened. One moment I was singing alone, the next Dorothy was singing with me, word for word in perfect tune.

Electrified, I played on and on without a break, praying that the spell would not be broken.

What a memory! How marvelously her mind had retained the words of song after song—far better than an average 8-year-old!

I heard someone sob. I turned and saw Dorothy's mother in the doorway, tears streaming down her cheeks, unable to do anything but hold out her arms to her child.

From that moment on, life was different for Dorothy. From singing, it was not far to speaking, although words with music always came first. We made up songs for everything.

Other changes took place in Dorothy. Her tensions disappeared along with the frustrations of a spirit bottled up; so did her wildness.

As Dorothy continued to learn I lengthened my stay; just another month until she could tell time... another until she learned the alphabet. When I left, the month had stretched to five years. Dorothy was a poised, self-sufficient 13-year-old.

Normal? Not if normal means "average." All of us have strong points and weak points and in Dorothy everything is extreme. But this means extremes of knowing and expressing that most of us never reach.

Those wavy lines, for instance, the ones she drew again and again? When she had enough words she told me, "That's what the wind looks like."

Dorothy, your eyes see deep down, important things. Your ears hear silent things, your world is set to music. Oh, if God left something out of you, it was only to fill it with Himself.

Next—Mel Blanc, the movies? "Man of a thousand voices," tells how prayer helped him survive when nearly every bone in his body was broken in an auto accident.

HOSPITAL COSTS ROCKETING

Medicare Revenues May Not Be Enough

By EDMOND LEBRETON
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rocketing hospital costs may force Congress to find more tax revenue.

Congress Approves Viet Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress sent to President Johnson yesterday a bill authorizing $4.5 billion for additional purchases of aircraft, missiles and other expenditures for Vietnam.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield told his colleagues he does not believe changes made in a Vietnam war policy statement by a Senate-House conference committee changed the intent.

The final version pledged support of U.S. troops and backing of Johnson and "other men of goodwill" in a search for a negotiated settlement. A third provision was altered slightly to urge the meeting of any group of nations for the purpose of "bringing the conflict to an honorable conclusion."

The Senate approved the final version by voice vote shortly after the House gave its approval in 363-13 roll-call vote.

Mansfield originally sought to give unqualified support of the 1954 and 1962 Geneva accords as the only means of honorably ending the war.

But the House refused this version because it might be construed as "full endorsement of the implications of the Geneva accords" and substituted language urging any group of nations to help find peace.

Calling himself "the granddaddy of all the hawks," L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., chairman of the House and Armed Services Committee said his opposition to the Senate language was based on his desire to "bring this meat grinder of a ground war to an honorable conclusion."

ness to keep the medicare program in the black, Wilbur D. Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee indicated yesterday.

The Arkansas Democrat expressed his concern in a question and answer session with spokesmen for the American Hospital Association. They appeared at the committee's hearings on President Johnson's Social Security increase proposals.

The AHA witnesses estimated that hospital expenses will reach an average of $57.93 per patient a day by next September. This would be an increase of 18.6 per cent in a year.

They said increases at about the same rate are in sight for the next three to five years at least, pointing to a cost rise to about $75 a day.

Mills observed that the rate of increase is "about twice as much as we estimated in fixing the tax to pay for medicare."

This tax is now one-half of 1 per cent on employees and a similar amount on employers, figured on the first $6,600 each person earns. It is scheduled to go up degrees to eight-tenths of 1 per cent.

Mills mentioned as possibilities raising the tax and diverting to medicare some of the regular Social Security tax now earmarked for retirement needs, which he said had been somewhat overestimated. He said he intends to pursue the subject with officials in later executive sessions.

Either course presumably might compete with Johnson's proposals to increase Social Security benefits, using the present surplus and also increasing the tax.

William Mueller of AHA said two factors contributed to the sharp rise in hospital costs: wage and salary increases to traditionally low-paid personnel because of federal minimum wage legislation, and competition for nurses and "the increasing complexity of medical care — more being done for the patient."

Charges Fly After Loan of Auto

CORRY — When a Corry woman loaned her car to a friend Sunday, she and the driver both reaped a harvest of traffic violations.

Corry city police said they have cited Mrs. Rose Olson, of 825 E. Sixth st. and James M. Slagle, of 8½ First ave., the aftermath of Slagle's having borrowed Mrs. Olson's car. Police said Slagle was traveling south on Summer st. Sunday when the car went out of control, went into a snow bank and stopped on top of a hedge.

Investigating officers charged Slagle with reckless driving and driving without a license. Mrs. Olson was charged for permitting an unlicensed operator to drive her car.

Information on all three charges was filed with Alderman Merle Ottaway.

Charge Canal Would Divert Lake Waters

The Upper Ohio Valley Association charged today that the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal would divert huge quantities of water from Lake Erie, creating navigation and pollution problems for every community on the lakefront.

Robert Taylor, executive secretary of the association, challenged the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to hold public hearings on the effect this diversion would have on Lake Erie water levels.

Taylor said an engineering firm's study for the Power Authority of the State of New York concluded that the proposed canal's construction would "permanently deprive Lake Erie of over a million acre feet of water." This is the water that would be impounded in the proposed Grand River Reservoir.

Operation of the canal, the report continued, "would require further substantial diversions of water from Lake Erie," estimated at between 1,400 and

2,200 cubic feet per second. "The public is entitled to know the damage that this diversion of Lake Erie water might do to the entire Great Lakes area," Taylor said.

Taylor pointed out that federal, state and local governments are now grappling with the problem of how to reduce pollution in Lake Erie. "The pollution problem," he said, "would probably be intensified by the diversion of a substantial amount of water from Lake Erie."

Even a slight reduction in the lake's water level would have a big impact on shore facilities and on both commercial shipping and pleasure boating, Taylor warned.

"The Upper Ohio Valley Association contends," he said, "that the proposed canal would not only be a waste of billions of dollars of public funds needed for other purposes, but would also be damaging and harmful in many ways."

Black Fly Debate

It seems as if I may have kicked another hornet's nest when I wrote a recent column on the proposed black fly experiment being sponsored in the Tidioute-Tionesta area. At least in expressing my views I drew two very interesting letters from persons (Robert E. Schwak, chairman of the Tidioute Lion's Club Black Fly Committee and Robert M. Scott) whose opinions differ from mine.

As differences of opinion originate from a difference of viewpoint, it is reasonable to assume that the authors of these letters are viewing the problem from a different viewpoint than I am. And this could easily be. For there are two distinct viewpoints common in all discussions of the pesticide-insecticide issue, and like two ruts in a muddy road they will never be brought together.

For convenience, one could be called the "agricultural" and the other the "ecological" viewpoint. Each are supported by those most directly affected by the use of pesticides-insecticides in matters of close personal interest.

I disagree with the agriculturist's stand that he has every right to pollute our land with chemicals because he is "producing food." This is far too close to the same argument the industrialists used when they were poisoning our streams and contaminating our air and defended themselves by saying that they were "producing jobs."

In taking this stand, I am in good company. The Audubon Society, Wildlife Federation, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and the Pennsylvania fish and game commissions support this view. In addition, the use of pesticides (even the new "safe" ones) is currently questioned to the extent that state universities in California, Colorado, Connecticut, National Academy of Science, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, North Carolina, Ohio, Virginia and Wisconsin are conducting test projects.

The list of those who support the "ecological" viewpoint is almost unending, as is the list of those who support the "agricultural" viewpoint. But in each case the difference of opinion can be traced to personal interests.

This, I think, brings up the question as to which viewpoint is most suitable to the Tidioute-Tionesta area. And relative to this question are statements made by John L. Buckley of the Fish and Wildlife Service while speaking at a symposium on the use of pesticides-insecticides.

Buckley said: "The health hazards of eating game meat has caused concern to some people, since residues in these animals may exceed legal tolerances set for domestic meat animals."

"This problem is significant when one considers that in New York, hunters took 67,782 deer, 571 bear, 396,000 pheasants, 1,543,000 cottontails, 492,000 ruffed grouse, and perhaps 100,000 woodcock. In fact, the USDA estimates our consumption of game as 2.7 pounds per person per year. One may well question whether it is rational to eat game meats containing residues that would be unacceptable in domestic foods."

"There seem to be three possible solutions to this problem: (1) reduction in the use of persistent toxic pesticides; (2) closing the seasons to prevent taking of game known to contain unacceptable residues; or (3) permitting the taking, but discouraging the eating of game."

Buckley's statement may be less than relevant to the Tidioute black fly problem, but it does point up one of the chief reasons I object to the use of chemicals in controlling pests anywhere at any time. Either in the air or in our streams.

If biological means can be used in the Tidioute project—fine. Providing the biological pest-fighter doesn't become more of a pest than the one it controls. This has happened, you know.

In both letters it was suggested that I may be too much influenced by Carson's "Silent Spring" and not enough by Whitten's "That We May Live." Truthfully, I am not too much impressed by either. My real feeling is that, in writing "Silent Spring," Carson hit an unexpected gold mine and Whitten is currently trying to jump the claim. Both have slanted their books to the market that could bring the greatest profit. However, Carson's "Silent Spring" did have one redeeming feature—it alerted the public to the fact that a problem did exist.

But neither "Silent Spring" nor "That We May Live" will solve the dilemma presently facing the residents of the affected area. The question they must ask themselves is, I think, "Are we an 'ecological' or 'agricultural' community?" When they have answered this question they will be in an enlightened position to accept or reject the suggestions offered by others.

Until they answer this question, they leave themselves in a precarious position, both esthetically and financially.

Walt Frazier Outstanding Small All-America Cager

By TED MEIER

Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Walt Frazier, the outstanding small-college player of the season, is ready to lead the Southern Illinois Salukis against St. Peter's of New Jersey Thursday night in the first round of the National Invitation Basketball Tournament at Madison Square Garden.

Frazier, a 6-foot-3 junior whose all-around play made the Salukis known as the giant-killers, headed the 1967 college basketball Little All-America announced Wednesday by The Associated Press.

Four seniors — Earl Monroe of Winston-Salem State, Sam Smith of Kentucky Wesleyan, Phil Jackson of North Dakota and Mel Cox of Central Washington — were named on the first team with Frazier in the voting by 103 sports writers and broadcasters.

Don Carlos of Otterbein headed a second team rounded out by Charles Core of Southeastern Louisiana, Al Tucker of Oklahoma Baptist, Elbert Miller of Nevada Southern and John Dickson of Arkansas State.

Wayne Proffitt of Lynchburg, Rod McDonald of Whitworth, Glynn Sauters of Northeast Louisiana, Willie Scott of Alabama State and Henry Logan of Western Carolina completed the 15-man squad as a third team.

Each of the 15 will receive certificates from The Associated Press.

Jack Theeler of South Dakota, Dan Bolden of Southwest Missouri, Gary Padalino of Hartford, Roger Raspen of Millersville, Pa. State, Harold Booker of Cheyney State, Butch Wade of Indiana State and Dan Smith of Howard Payne were among the leading honorable mentions.

Frazier led Southern Illinois to a 20-2 record and a 15-game winning streak going into the NIT. The Salukis passed up an invitation to compete in the NCAA small college championship tournament in favor of the NIT after beating such major teams as Louisville, Texas Western, Wichita and St. Louis. Monroe, also 6-3, led Winston-Salem to 25 straight victories and a 26-1 record with an average of better than 40 points a game. Smith, 6-7, and Jackson, 6-8, sparked Kentucky Wesleyan and North Dakota to successful seasons while Cox, 6-5, beat out Carlos for the last place on the first team.

Carlos, like Jackson, was a member of the 1966 Little A-A first team.

Salukis Finish 1st On Final AP Ballot

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Southern Illinois Salukis, winners in 20 of 22 games with both losses to major-college opponents, finished in first place in the final Associated Press small-college basketball poll of the 1966-67 season yesterday.

The Salukis, scheduled to play St. Peter's, N.J., in an opening round game of the National Invitation Tournament at Madison Square Garden tonight, collected 12 votes for the top position and 147 points in the balloting by a national panel of 15 sports writers and broadcasters.

Kentucky Wesleyan placed second followed in order by Lincoln of Missouri, Cheyney State,

San Diego State, Indiana State, Akron, Arkansas State, Southwest Missouri and Grambling.

Southern Illinois lost only to Louisville and Southern Methodist in regular season, and the Salukis beat Louisville, No. 2 in the major-college poll, in a return game.

The Salukis defeated Southwest Missouri 93-66 for their 20th victory last week.

Kentucky Wesleyan won three games for a final 21-3 mark. The Panthers from Owensboro had 117 points in the voting which was on the usual basis of 10 points for a first-place vote, 9 for second etc.

The Salukis have placed among the first 10 teams five times since the small-college poll was originated seven years ago. They were third in 1966 and 1965, tied for seventh in 1963 and ninth in 1962. They missed out only in 1961 and 1964.

Cheyney State was the leader and North Dakota the runner-up in last season's final poll. The final Top Ten, with first-place votes in parentheses, regular season records and total points:

1. S. Illinois (12) 20-2 147
2. Ky. Wesleyan 21-3 117
3. Lincoln, Mo. 24-2 88
4. Cheyney State 24-2 77
5. San Diego State 21-4 63
6. Indiana State 20-4 61
7. Akron 18-4 52
8. Ark. State (1) 16-6 35
9. Southwest Mo. 19-4 26
10. Grambling 19-6 25

Barney Gidders Shatters Kent St. Bowling Record

Barney Gidders of 120 Oak St. set a new record at the Carling Black Label Invitational Bowling Tournament at Kent State University, Kent, Ohio, on February 25, 1967.

The local youth, representing Sigma Nu Fraternity in the event, rolled a 256, 225 and a whopping 265 for a record total of 749. Not only was this the highest three game series in the history of the tournament,

NEW YORK (AP) — Southern Illinois' small-college kings and the Thundering Herd of Marshall, W. Va., make their first National Invitation Tournament appearances tonight as the nation's oldest post-season basketball classic begins its 30th run at Madison Square Garden.

The giant-killing Salukis of Carbondale, Ill., tangle with St. Peter's of New Jersey in the nightcap of the first-round doubleheader after Villanova's stacked zone defenses test the hurrying Herd from Huntington, W. Va.

Completing the opening round are afternoon and evening twin bills Saturday, with two-time champion Providence taking on Memphis State, New Mexico meeting Syracuse, Marquette facing Tulsa and Rutgers going against Utah State.

Nebraska, which joined the 14-team field yesterday, meets the Marshall-Villanova winner in a Monday night quarter-final doubleheader that also pits the Southern Illinois-St. Peter's survivor against a still undetermined representative from the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The ACC team, which will come out of the conference's post-season tournament, and Nebraska drew first-round byes.

Wayne Frazier, a 6-foot-3 Little All-America, leads Southern Illinois as a pressure player who averaged 17.5 points per game. He paced the Salukis to a 20-2 season mark, best among NIT entrants. Among Southern Illinois' five major college victims were Texas Western, the 1.66 NCAA champion, and Louisville, this year's No. 2 team. The Salukis yielded only 57 points per-start.

St. Peter's, whose .536 shooting percentage leads all major schools, hope to counter Frazier with 6-5 Pete O'Dea, one of the top 10 rebounders in the country and a 19.5-point scorer. The Peacocks, in the NIT for the third time, were 18-5 over the season.

Marshall has averaged 87 points per game in posting an 18-6 mark. The Herd handed Mid-American Conference champion Toledo its only setback of the season.

Villanova, 17-8, earned its sixth NIT berth by winning 10 of its last 11 after three starting sophomores, including high-scorer Johnny Jones, mastered Coach Jack Kraft's intricate defensive patterns. The Wildcats' held All-America Jim Walker to five points in beating Providence, and also have whipped St. Peter's, Marquette and Memphis State.

While the NIT completes first-round play Saturday, the NCAA tournament gets under way at four regional sites.

West Virginia meets Princeton and St. John's, N.Y., tackles Temple at Blacksburg, Va.; Connecticut plays Boston College at Kingston, R.I.; Western Kentucky meets Dayton and Toledo takes on Virginia Tech at Lexington, Ky., and a doubleheader at Fort Collins, Colo., pits Houston against New Mexico State and Texas Western against Seattle.

Gannon Stays Alive Nips Titans, 67-66

ERIE — The Gannon College Golden Knights posted a 67-66 win over Westminster to equal their best-of-three series at a game apiece here last night.

The third game of the series will be played tonight at Meadville High School at 8 p.m. The winner of the game will represent District 18 of the NAIA in the tournament at Kansas City later in the month.

This marks the first time that Gannon College has ever won a post season game. They had failed on eight previous occasions.

Gannon won the game at the foul line where they scored on 21 of 29 attempts. Westminster made good on only 16 of 26. Most of the foul shots by both teams came late in the game.

Ron Johnson, a 6-7 freshman, made seven out of seven clutch free throws. Cool Cal Graham hit on seven of 11 and made the 67th point with 40 seconds left.

The defensive play of Ben Wiley made a big difference over the first meeting which saw the Knights lose by 10. Wiley limited the Titans big gun, John Fontanella, to two field goals. He averages 23 points a game.

Hickory '5' Walloped By Schenley

NEW WILMINGTON—The defending PIAA Class A state champions, Pittsburgh Schenley rolled over Hickory here last night by a 79-58 score.

Schenley was paced by All-Stater Ken Durrett with 27 points. He sat out the final two minutes of the second quarter and all of the third period because of foul trouble. He still found time to be the leading scorer and top rebounder in the game.

Hickory was out-rebounded 64-38 with Durrett collecting 17 of the missed shots.

Schenley got off to a quick 24-12 lead after one period. In the second quarter they went cold and the Hornets cut the lead to eight points while Durrett was on the bench.

The halftime score saw the defending champs ahead by a 42-32 margin.

In the third period Montell Brundage and Eddie Gibson picked up the scoring pace for Schenley as they outscored the District 10 representatives by a 15-11 margin.

With Durrett back in the lineup in the fourth period the winners put the icing on the cake by scoring 24 points to 15 for the Hornets.

Brundage ended the game with 19 points and Gibson had 18. Hickory was paced by Bill Douds with 23 points and Tom Murtaugh with 12 markers.

Schenley will now play Bradford of District 9 in the Western Regional semifinals at Westminster College on Saturday. The winner of that game will play the winner of the Altoona-Ambridge game for the right to compete in the State Championship game on March 18.

The first half of the game was seasaw with the Knights taking a 36-33 lead at the intermission.

Early in the second half the Titans scored to a five point lead.

Graham and Wiley took over for the Knights. They hit on combinations of long shots and driving layups. Behind these two seniors the Knights took a 67-63 lead with 40 seconds left in the game.

The Titans got a foul shot and a long jumper by Fontanella but Erie five was home free.

Besides being the leading scorer in the game with 21 points Graham was the top rebounder in the game as he hauled in 19 of the Knights 38 rebounds.

Other Knights in double figures were Johnson with 13 and Wiley and Don Ruminski with 11 each.

Joe Yost with 12 and Russ Boston with 11 paced the Titans.

Ex-Red Jacket Gridder Dies In Pittsburgh

Alexander S. Crevar, a former member of the Warren Red Jackets professional football team, died at his home in Whitehall, a Pittsburgh suburb, last Thursday.

Crevar, 54, had coached football at Hopewell, Brentwood and Baldwin High Schools. He resigned as head grid coach at the latter school in 1961, but remained on the faculty.

Born in Buffalo, he attended Allegheny High School and held degrees from Edinboro State Teachers College and the University of Michigan.

Crevar played for two years with the Red Jackets, one of the top teams in its day, before accepting a coaching position at Brentwood in 1942. After serving in World War II, he returned to Brentwood, then became head football and track coach at Baldwin High in 1952.

Among other offices held in various organizations, he was treasurer and past president of the Western Pennsylvania Football Coaches Association.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Gazella Crevar, a son, Jeffrey, a senior and a football player at Baldwin High; a sister and a brother.

Watt, who posted a 9-7 record for the Orioles as a rookie last year, was injured by an off-target throw from catcher Vic Roznovsky as he slid into third base, during a running drill.

The Social Security Set

(c) N. Y. Times News Service
CLEARWATER, Fla.—Bubbling with anticipation, Gene Mauch, the dandy little manager of the Phillies was ready last December to board a plane for Hawaii and a well earned vacation in that earthly paradise. Suddenly he heard himself being paged over the loudspeaker system at the airport. Puzzled, he left his wife and daughter to take a phone call from John Quinn, the front office boss of the Phils. When Gene rejoined them, he looked as shattered as a man whose fortune had just been wiped out.

"It was the louisiest vacation I ever had," he said today. The news which ruined it was word that Bill White had ripped apart an achilles tendon in a freak accident and probably would be unable to play ball again before May. If that medical estimate was correct, it would have killed any Philadelphia pennant pretensions. But now dapper Gene is able to joke about it because White has made so remarkable a recovery that he's already in camp and might even be in the line-up by opening day.

"I still can't run," said buoyant Bill. "But I'm hitting the ball as well as ever, maybe even better, because I can't fall into my one bad habit of lunging for the pitch. In the field I merely lack some lateral movement. Soon I'll be able to run again. Every day I walk miles in heavy sand and sea water to strengthen my foot. I'll be as good as new faster than those doctors ever expected."

Unless he can recover that quickly the Phils are in trouble because White was their second best run producer, topped only by Richie Allen. The accident was ironic inasmuch as it happened in a paddle ball game while Bill was getting himself in shape for baseball. He reached for a backhand shot and the tendon tore.

"The gap was so big," he recounted, "that I could put my finger in the hole. They sewed the torn tendons together, put me in a case up to my hips for two months and in a half cast for one month. Now I don't even tape it, I'm coming along fine."

But Bill is 33 years old, an age when youthful resiliency has diminished and recuperative powers behave more slowly. In fact, he symbolizes in many respects the entire Philly ball club. It has to be the oldest in the majors. Hence those forecasters who rank teams in the coming pennant races hesitate when they try to assay the Philadelphiaans.

Now that Sandy Koufax is gone, the Phils probably have the strongest pitching staff in the league with Jim Bunning, Chris Short, Larry Jackson and Dick Ellsworth, each a 20-game winner at least once. The team hits solidly and with power. It fields well. But so many regulars are so close to the baseball equivalent of social security eligibility that it could wilt under the enervating strains of the latter stages of the season.

Adding to the age quotient—presuming that he makes it—is Ruben Gomez, the elderly pitcher who once was a New York Giant back in the glory days of the Polo Grounds. Ruben has not performed in the majors since 1962 and is almost 40 years old. But Mauch spotted him in Puerto Rico last winter and was so impressed that he brought the once-gifted Latin here on a trial basis.

"He throws exactly the same as he did 10 years ago," says Gene in his preemptory, I-know-what-I'm-talking-about fashion. He throws that low ball along with sinkers, sliders and screw-jies. He throws ground balls. I'm not sure yet that he'll even be worth a quarter but I think he will."

Any relief pitcher who can force the batters to hit grounders is invaluable. Mauch reinforced what had been a weak bullpen by also adding Pedro Ramos, age 32, from the Yankees and Dick Hall, age 36, from the Orioles. Two non-roster pitcher are Gomez, and Joey Jay, 31. Jay is the two-time 21-gamer for the Reds but has been floundering ever since. "Jay is throwing fantastic," says Gene. "He looks just as good as he was in 1961 and 1962. If my early estimate of his abilities is correct, he'll move right in with my Big Four. Listen, I wouldn't trade my team for any other one. The ingredients are there. We just have to put them together."

That is not entirely as easy as it sounds. The shorteststop on any team is the defensive key and Dick Groat is now 36 years old. Even though he has lost his step and never was too fast, his sense of anticipation has made him a superior operative. Furthermore, he's an artist on the hit-and-run.

The Phillies will be a prime contender, all right. But much will depend on both White's complete recovery and the inroads made by advancing years.

Pro Grid Combined Draft Next Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — The American and National Football Leagues will hold their first combined player draft in New York next week under a compromise plan which prohibits the selection of athletes red-shirted by colleges.

Pete Rozelle, commissioner of pro football, said in the future no player who had collegiate eligibility remaining could be chosen by a pro team until five seasons of football had elapsed since he first entered a recognized college.

In recent years NFL teams drafted redshirts in the regular draft while AFL teams held a special draft for them. A red-shirt is a player who still has college eligibility left after the class in which he entered college has been there four years.

The new plan, an obvious compromise to the two factions in the newly merged pro setup, could be a boon to college football. Several years ago, George Sauer Jr., was redshirted by the University of Texas but was chosen by the New York Jets as a junior.

Sauer signed with the AFL club before the start of his senior year and has become a star with the professionals. During the off season he is working on an advance degree in mathematics at Texas.

Major League Baseball's Exhibition Slate Starts

The New York Yankees, who finished in last place for the first time in 54 years in 1966, get off first today when the 1967 major league exhibition baseball schedule opens with the spotlight on more than a score of highly regarded young players.

The Yankees, hoping that Mickey Mantle will make a successful conversion from the outfield to first base, take on Washington at the Senators' training quarters in Pompano Beach, Fla., in the only game pairing big league teams.

Six games are on tap tomorrow and on Saturday all 20 teams are scheduled to see action. Tomorrow's games match Baltimore and Minnesota in Miami, Fla. at night; Boston and the Chicago White Sox at Sarasota, Fla.; Kansas City and Detroit at Bradenton, Fla.; Washington and Houston at Cocoa, Fla.; San Francisco and the Chicago Cubs at Scottsdale, Ariz.; and Cincinnati and Philadelphia at Clearwater, Fla. Outfielders Rick Monday of Kansas City, Hank Allen of Washington, Don Bosch of the New York Mets, Walt Williams of the Chicago White Sox, Reg Smith of Boston and Frank Johnson of San Francisco, first baseman Lee May of Cincinnati, catcher Duane Josephson of the White Sox, third baseman Ron Clark of Minnesota plus pitchers Jim Ollom of Minnesota, Tom Seaver of the New York Mets and Stan Bahnsen of the Yanks are among the rookies expected to get the closest scrutiny.

Monday, a $100,000 bonus player, batted only .267 for Mobile last season. The Athletics, though, need power and Monday has it. He slammed 23 homers and drove in 72 runs.

Allen, brother of Philadelphia's Richie Allen, had 23 homers, 88 RBI and a .299 batting average for Hawaii of the Pacific Coast League in 1966. In nine games with the Senators toward the end of the season he hit .387 with 12 hits in 31 tries.

Bosch is expected to be the Mets' regular centerfielder. He had a .283 batting mark for Columbus of the International League and was voted the best fielder at his position in a poll of the circuit's managers.

Smith led the International League in batting with .320 while Williams topped the Pacific Coast League with a .330 mark. Johnson, with the Giants' PCL farm team in Phoenix, batted .308 with 15 homers.

The Reds' May was the No. 5 International League batsman with .310. He had 16 homers.

Clark is expected to start at third for the Twins. He hit .294 for Denver of the PCL and was the RBI co-leader with 94. Josephson was the PCL's MVP after batting .324 for Indianapolis.

Ollom, who had a 20-8 record for Denver, was the PCL's first 20-game winner since 1957. Bahnsen, rated the best big league pitching prospect by international League managers, and Seaver, a 12-game winner at Jacksonville of the IL, are expected to be starters for the New York teams.

Jamestown Man Facing Trial

JAMESTOWN — Wilbur Mower, 47, of 390 1/2 Spring st., Jamestown, is scheduled to appear in City Court this morning to answer a pair of charges. Mower was arrested yesterday at Fifth and Cherry streets in downtown Jamestown and charged with driving while his license was revoked and falsifying a learners driving permit. Bail on the two charges was set at $750. Police records show Mower was the operator of a car involved in a fatal accident at Fifth and Prendergast avenues last year. Mower's license was revoked following the accident.

Crime Lab Probing Deaths

JAMESTOWN — The New York State Police Laboratory in Albany will attempt to determine the cause of death of a young man and a young woman in a Jamestown apartment. Chautauque County Coroner Frederick L. Hitchcock said an autopsy conducted Tuesday night eliminated asphyxiation as a possible cause of death. Specimens have been sent to the State Police Laboratory in Albany and it will be a week to 10 days until results are known. Yesterday city detectives continued their investigation into the deaths of 20-year-old Charles Santa Maria, formerly of Irving, N.Y., and 19-year-old Stella Thompson of Jamestown.

Assemblyman Sees No Need To Question Liquor Prices

By JOHN L. TAYLOR

HARRISBURG (AP) — The chairman of the House Liquor Control Committee said yesterday he saw no need for an investigation of the recent price increases approved by the Liquor Control Board.

Rep. Matthew J. Ryan, R-Delaware, said his committee believed that the board did the right thing in approving the increases, which had been sought by certain distillers.

"The board told us that the only alternative to raising prices would have been to stop supplying state stores with brands whose companies forced the price increases," Ryan said.

"The board and we feel we would not be justified in removing these brands from the shelf and deny them to those Pennsylvanians who are willing to pay the increased price."

Schmitt said earlier that he was not satisfied with the answers given by the board and that he planned to introduce a resolution calling for a full-scale probe.

Ryan referred to plans of Gov. Shafer to appoint a special "blue ribbon committee" to study various facets of the board's operations from purchasing to enforcement.

The Republican lawmaker, however, noted that his committee's meeting with the board dealt solely with the recent price increase, which resulted from a New York State law upheld by the U. S. Supreme Court.

In the past, Pennsylvania and the 17 other states that own and operate liquor stores had received a discount from distillers. The New York law, however, provided that distillers sell in New York at the same price as in other states, and rather than reduce the prices in New York, distillers raised prices elsewhere.

Ryan said to his knowledge Ohio is the only control state among the 18 that has refused to pay the higher prices. He added, however, that it was the board's opinion that Ohio eventually would face the alternatives of paying the price or removing the brands from their shelves.

Demonstrators Schools Outdo Police Academies

By KENT ZIMMERMAN

CHICAGO (AP)—Professional training schools are turning out demonstrators who are more skilled than some policemen, a California lawyer told a national symposium on law enforcement yesterday.

"No longer are we dealing with our amateurs in riots and demonstrations," said Raymond M. Mombosse, attorney with the California Department of Justice.

"We see the same faces in riot after riot. There are at least four training schools for demonstrators in California, and they are effective. By the time a demonstrator hits the street he is probably better trained than many of our police."

"There may come a time when a demonstrator must have a Ph.D. before he can carry a protest sign."

Mombosse declared there is a need for quick, unified action by police and government when a riot is threatened. He said procedures have been established for dealing with riots in California.

"Our methods are working, but you haven't heard much about them because we have had this success in controlling riots," he said. "We moved fast and got the manpower into the riot area. The sooner you get there the better your chances are to put down the riot."

"Every governor," he said, "should have a procedural manual so he will know what powers and equipment are available to him. Among our procedural suggestions are that when a riot is threatened all bars in the riot area should be closed and the sale of firearms should be halted."

Mombosse said liaison should be developed between all police units in the state. In the case of riots near a state line, he added, regional defense pacts are advisable.

"Discipline and inspired leadership are vital factors in riot control," Mombosse said. "It was inspired leadership that finally turned the tide in Watts."

Picketing Irish Farmers Halt Dublin Food Shipments

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Picket lines of striking farmers blocked Dublin yesterday and turned back trucks from Northern Ireland loaded with cattle and vegetables intended for the Irish capital.

Dealers talked of a meat famine by the weekend. Stocks of vegetables were getting low in stores as a week-long strike entered its third day.

About 500 angry farmers crashed through a police line as industry and Commerce Minister George Colley arrived to open a factory at Ballymossduff, 60 miles outside Dublin.

The farmers pelted the car with chunks of turf and ham-

MGM Management Defeats Dissident Stockholders

By JACK LEFLER
NEW YORK (AP) — Management of Metro Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc., repulsed yesterday an attempt by a dissident group of stockholders to take control of the movie-making company in a long and bitter proxy fight. A federal court suit filed by the losing side promptly challenged the result.

Management's slate of 12 candidates for the board of directors defeated a ticket headed by Philip J. Levin, New Jersey land developer, a director and MGM's largest single stockholder.

It was a victory for Robert H. O'Brien, 62, MGM president whose direction of the company, 43 years old, had been disputed by Levin. O'Brien's candidates received votes of approximately 2,572,000 shares. The Levin slate received votes from 1,881,000 shares.

000 votes cast by the Hamilton group and Baldwin securities, among others. Levin told a news conference after the stockholders' meeting he would retain the 11 per cent of MGM's outstanding stock that he owns and keep his dissident group intact "to watch progress of the corporation."

The proxy vote was the second victory over Levin for O'Brien in nine months. Earlier Levin had lost his fight to stop the company from issuing two million shares.

He contended that MGM leased too many recent films to television too soon and got too little money for them. He argued that MGM should develop big-name stars and keep them under exclusive contract. And he criticized package deals for production of films with independent producers.

Consular Treaty Foes Charge It May Prolong Vietnam War

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — Out-numbered Senate foes of the U.S.-Soviet consular treaty charged yesterday it is a diplomatic concession that could prolong the war in Vietnam.

Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., said approval of the treaty now would convince people "we've gone crazy."

But the angry debate — in a sparsely attended Senate — appeared to be little more than a detour on the way to Senate ratification of the treaty, one step by which President Johnson seeks to build bridges of understanding between East and West.

Ratification, which will take a two-thirds majority of the senators voting, is expected sometime next week.

Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., put his opposition into a formal reservation to the treaty, proposing that its operation be delayed until President Johnson can assure Congress that Soviet weapons are not prolonging the war in Vietnam.

Mundt said he had no head count to indicate outcome of the debate, but he forecast it would be close. A supporter of the treaty, Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., said he believes at least 80 of the Senate's 100 members will vote for approval.

The convention would set guidelines for the treatment of citizens of one country arrested in the other, and grants diplomatic immunity to consulate staffs.

The State Department has said those guidelines would lead to the opening of one Soviet consulate in the United States and a U.S. consulate in Leningrad.

Mundt carried his fight to a Republican conference, but Sen. Thurston B. Morton of Kentucky, chief GOP promoter of the agreement, said he did not

Strike Affects College

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio University faculty and executive committee called meetings yesterday as the school prepared for a possible shutdown during a strike by non-academic employees.

President Vernon R. Alden said he would meet with the committee and faculty members before broadcasting a report to students and appealing for an end to the strike.

The response to his appeal, he said, would influence today's decision on whether the 15,000-student school would close.

Alden said the four-day-old strike by newly-organized Local 37 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees had brought the school "close to a state of serious emergency."

Some 400-500 workers remained off their jobs yesterday, asking dues checkoffs and higher pay. The union said lack of checkoffs hurts its recruiting efforts.

Alden said only the legislature could grant checkoffs and said his suggestion that the union take its case to court was rejected in a "very disappointing" meeting of both sides Tuesday night.

The local has been picketing the campus and Alden said this has created difficulty in bringing in food and other supplies. Administration personnel have been filling in on the jobs of the strikers, such as cafeteria workers, bakers, janitors and others.

In addition, workmen on the school's $7 million construction projects have been observing the picket lines and work on the buildings has stopped.

However, classes have been maintained as have most services except for one closed cafeteria.

think the session had changed any minds.

Mundt doesn't deny that a majority of the Senate backs the treaty. But, since a two-thirds vote is required, he said undecided senators could hold the crucial balance.

A key Republican proponent — GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen — was hospitalized for fatigue, but Sen. Smith said he would be back in the Senate for next week's voting. Dodd said the treaty should not be approved until the Soviet Union cooperates in ending the Vietnam war. Ratification would run "counter to the policy of firmness" that can ultimately thwart Communist expansion in Vietnam, he said.

Pentagon Cuts Off GI Vietnam Allowance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government plans to cut off a cost-of-living allowance now provided to more than 31,200 U.S. servicemen in Vietnam.

The Pentagon said yesterday that effective May 1 the so-called "COLA" — cost-of-living-allowance — payments to military personnel in the war zone will end, with a yearly saving of $21 million.

This differential, ranging from $27 a month for men in grade E-2 — privates — to $84 for generals has been provided to help servicemen offset excessive living costs in Vietnam, mainly in the Saigon area.

However, officials said a study showed that for Vietnam in general living expenses were lower than in the states.

The Air Force Times, an unofficial military newspaper, said about 60 per cent of the 31,268 Vietnam-assigned men drawing the allowance live in the Saigon and Tan Son Nhut area in air conditioned hotels acquired as military housing.

"It is difficult for men in the field to understand why those in the air conditioned hotels should draw more money than those in the dugouts and bunkers," the paper said.

Servicemen in other overseas areas are not affected by the move. In Paris, for example, allowances continue at rates ranging from $42 monthly for higher grade enlisted men to $73.50 monthly for generals.

All servicemen in Vietnam still get $65 monthly above their basic pay, plus certain income tax credits, for being stationed in a combat area.

Judge Tells Congress of Need To Wiretap, Bug Criminals

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior federal judge J. Edward Lumbard of New York, urged Congress yesterday to give police and law enforcement officials broad powers to use wiretapping and bugging against suspected criminals. He disputed the contention this is "dirty business."

Lumbard, chief judge of the U.S. Second Circuit Court of Appeals, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee that such authority — under proper safeguards — is "the single most important tool for investigating organized crime."

The gray-haired judge and one-time federal and state prosecutor urged senators to broaden authority proposed in several bills before the subcommittee. These provide authority for federal and state officials to compel testimony and to use electronic devices against criminal suspects.

In view of the recent upsurge of nationwide crime, Judge Lumbard said, "it is the utmost importance to strengthen by all possible means the powers of law enforcement agencies to get evidence."

New York and four other states now authorize such wiretapping under court orders, he said, adding that a proposed Senate bill was too limited in listing only a few federal crimes for its use.

Chairman John L. McClellan, D-Ark., of the subcommittee, who has sponsored several bills which would reverse or limit recent supreme court decisions dealing with evidence and confessions, asked if there had been abuses under the New York wiretapping authority.

"None that I know about," the judge replied.

Philadelphia Dist. Atty. Arlen Specter testified that "people have literally gotten away with murder" as a result of some recent Supreme Court decisions.

Specter, recently picked by Philadelphia Republicans as a candidate for mayor, urged the subcommittee to permit trial judges to pass on whether a confession or statement was obtained under proper conditions.

Specter said that confessions and admissions by suspects had decreased sharply as a result of Supreme Court decisions.

"A review of the 200 criminal cases on the daily list in the Philadelphia courts shows that many of the guilty are being acquitted where confessions or admissions have been suppressed," he also said.

GOP Women Deny Purge Of Goldwater Supporters

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dorothy Elston, president of the National Federation of Republican Women, denied yesterday any indication of a purge of Barry Goldwater supporters in the selection of a 1968-70 slate of officers for the 500,000-member organization.

"Among those nominated," Mrs. Elston noted, "there are strong supporters of Barry Goldwater in 1964. This was not a purge of people who were for Goldwater."

Mrs. Elston issued a statement in reply to comments of Phyllis Schlafly of Alton, Ill., the federation's current first vice president, who was not named in the slate of proposed new officers.

Mrs. Schlafly, a Goldwater backer, has hinted she may wage a floor fight against the nominating committee's choice for the new president, Gladys O'Donnell, a Long Beach, Calif. businesswoman, aviatrix and long-time active GOP campaigner, who is considered a moderate in GOP politics.

Claiming support from federation conservatives, Mrs. Schlafly said in an interview yesterday she was being urged by members from all sections of the country to oppose Mrs. O'Donnell. But she said she would not make up her mind until the federation convention meets in Washington May 5-6.

As for the influence of so-called New York Liberals, Mrs.

Elston noted that the nominating committee, headed by a past federation president, Mrs. J.B. Parks of Colorado, sister of Sen. Gordon Allott, had been elected by the entire Board of Directors of the federation, which she said meant every state president in the country had a voice in it.

Jamestown Briefs

Only 13 property owners showed up at a public hearing on a street paving proposal Tuesday night. The Jamestown City Clerk had sent notices of the hearing to more than 150 property owners. City council will consider the paving program March 21.

The federal Economic Development Administration yesterday approved a $300,000 grant for part of the construction of a $2.8 million addition to Jamestown Community College.

A $38,000 grant for administration of a Neighborhood Youth Corps program in Chautauque County has been approved by the U.S. Department of Labor. The program began Feb. 6. Now enrolled are 13 persons.

Pay increases of about five per cent will be given all full time Jamestown municipal employees. City council Tuesday night approved the pay hike, effective April 1.

A food stamp plan will replace May 1 the present method of distributing surplus food in Jamestown.

The condition of Town of Busti Peace Justice H. W. Ayres was reportedly "slightly improved" yesterday. Mystery has surrounded the matter of how Ayres was injured early Sunday. He reportedly was unable to answer questions yesterday.

Some 60 people turned out Tuesday at a public hearing in Elmira to support a proposal that Blue Bird Coach Lines be allowed to operate a route from Jamestown to Binghamton. Connections would be made at Binghamton for New York.

Mayville teachers have asked for 1967-68 starting salaries of $5,700 with 12 to 14 $250 increments and $100 yearly increments after the final $250 step. Starting pay is now $5,200. A teachers' spokesman said starting salaries are expected to go up to $6,200 within two years, with $300 increments. Teachers asked a half year's pay for a year's or half-year's sabbatical leave.

Stranded Climbers Decline Army Rescue

TALKEETNA, Alaska (AP) — An Army helicopter landed at the bivouac of two climbers on the slopes of Mt. McKinley yesterday but the men declined evacuation.

Lt. Col. Ralph O. Bennett, chief of the Aviation Avionic and Aerial Survival Test Division at Fort Greeley and pilot of the helicopter, said the two men were in good condition and spirits.

The two climbers — Gregg Blomberg, 25, Denver, Colo., leader of the seven-man climbing party, and John Edwards, 35, Cleveland, Ohio — said they would prefer to await clearing weather which would permit landing of a small bush plane to carry them directly to the University of Alaska campus at College, Alaska. Scientists in the biological department there are standing by to run metabolism tests on the two mountaineers.

Bush pilot Don Sheldon sought to land his small plane at the party's base camp on Kahiltna Camp in mid-morning but severe turbulence and broken clouds forced him back.

Weather permitting, Sheldon will attempt the landing again today.

A predicted new snowstorm brought new concern for the climbers who are split in three groups between the 8,250 and 16,000 foot levels.

Scout Exhibit Here April 8 To Show Action

"Scouting in Action", a program that exhibits skills of local Boy Scouts, will be held April 8 in the National Guard Armory.

More than 20 display booths are scheduled to illustrate scouting activity in the area. The affair is being sponsored by Warren Kiwanis Club.

Dennis Hedges of the Kiwanis Club, chairman of ticket sales, announced that a kick-off program for the sale of tickets will be held at 7:30 p.m. today at the scout service center.

Chairman of the committee handling booths is Richard Ebel, while James Holding is heading the publicity department. Robert Hammerbeck is chairman of facilities and arrangements.

One of the first groups to sign up for the show was Troop 12, sponsored by First Lutheran Church. John Bimber, scoutmaster, and Carl Thomas, assistant scoutmaster, announced that their troop will display a leathercraft project, Troop 50 of Ludlow, with John Cox, scoutmaster, is preparing a communications booth.

Probe Holdup

FRANKLIN — The police department is continuing its investigation of the robbery involving William Swartzlager of 412 Second st. last Friday evening. The man charged that while walking along the street, he was attacked by four men who threw him to the pavement, face down and fled with a pocket watch, $6.78 in change and his wallet, as well as a cigarette lighter. The wallet was later found on West Second st.

Bill Before Senate Would Increase Wage Tax

HARRISBURG (AP) — A bill is before the State Senate that would permit a school district, with the exception of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia to impose a 1/2 per cent wage tax.

This would be permitted even though a 1 per cent wage was in existence in a particular school district or community.

In other words, it is conceivable under this bill that a person could end up paying a 1 1/2 per cent wage tax.

The measure was introduced Tuesday by Senate Majority Leader Stanley G. Stroup, R-Bedford, and Sen. Wilnot E. Fleming, R-Montgomery.

Under present law, the maximum wage tax that may be imposed on a resident is 1 per cent with either the municipality or a school district having the power to initiate the tax.

The law also permits this tax revenue to be split equally between the school district and the municipality if either so chooses.

For example, if a municipality initiates the tax, the school district may claim half of the revenue, or vice versa.

Under the proposed legislation a school district would have the authority to impose a 1/2 per cent wage tax even though a 1 per cent wage tax may be in existence.

This conceivably could result in a 1 1/2 per cent wage tax on a resident and, in this case, a school district could keep 1 per cent of the tax revenue and the municipality 1/2 per cent.

Glade Taxes Cut One Mill

Supervisors of Glade Township have voted a one-mill cut in 1967 taxes, it was announced yesterday.

The township levy was cut to two and one-half mills, bringing the total township tax to 44 mills. Action followed adoption of a 1967 budget estimated at $48,354.

Glade's tax levy is lowest in the county, next to Watson Twp., which derives heavy revenue from its national forest land. Supervisors took cognizance of the extensive home construction now under way, particularly in the Conewago Avenue Extension area where the Holly Apartment complex is being built and a number of private residences planned on the same tract.

Several new homes have been built or are in the planning stage in the Quaker Heights area, while scattered building is reported throughout the township, which has been enjoying a steady growth during recent years.

The supervisors also are considering additional sewer systems to meet the housing development. Steps have been taken to inquire into additional grants which might be available to help in the projects.

Town Crier

... By Les Rickey

The weatherman is trying to improve his image with the American public and I think he botched the job badly.

Time was when the cloud-watchers would say, for instance, that it would rain bucketfuls over the weekend and you could just forget that picnic. You forgot about it, made other plans, and when it turned out to be the nicest day of the season—well, you cussed a lot.

Or you were handed the prediction that it would, indeed, be sunny and warm and pleasant. You went on the picnic and the biggest thunderhead ever seen this side of Hawaii rolled right over the top of you, flooding everything for miles around. You could cuss then, too.

But now—nothing doing. They dodge the whole thing by giving you the responsibility for everything. They tell you that there is a 50 per cent chance that it will rain. How do you take this? There's a 50 per cent chance that it won't rain, too, and it leaves you right where you started. And how do you bet the family picnic on nine-to-one odds that there's going to be rain? And what kind of rain? Little sprinkles, interspersed with warm June sunshine? Or a slam-bang kind of rain, complete with lightning and howling winds? And just what the blazes is a 10 per cent anyhow?

This is, of course, the alternative. You can try to watch the 11:15 weather report. It's a long course in meteorology, the so-called science of predicting weather. You hear about low and high pressure areas, fronts, sashes, cloud formations, and humidity indexes. But that leaves you just as confused as the weatherman.

I don't know about you, but I pay my taxes to support the Weather Bureau for one reason—so I can have someone to blame for the weather. I don't care if they're right. I just want someone to blame.

And now they're ducking the issue. I feel cheated.

No Late Comers in County Races, Two Unopposed

With all petitions duly filed by candidates seeking nominations in the May primary election, only two county office holders remain unopposed—both for the second time.

Republicans Warren G. Lowe, Warren County prothonotary, and clerk of courts, and Sheriff D. E. Allen Jr. have no opposition within their own party ranks nor from the Democrats.

All the announced candidates for county commissioner filed their petitions and the voters must now decide which will get the nod. There are eleven Republicans and four Democrats in the race this year as compared to seven Republicans and five Democrats four years ago.

GOP aspirants are the incumbents, Blain M. Mead and D. H. Lay, Major Myron Kirberger, James G. Marshall, Anthony (Tony) Tomassoni, Dr. David K. Rice, W. Robert Walsh, John Teonchuk, Ellis S. Martin, James A. Blomquist, Ralph E. Brasington.

Democrats campaigning for the nomination are Chester R. Walker, the incumbent Lewis L. Cripeen, Thomas J. Donnelly and Sidney Mason.

Register and Recorder William E. Rice, Republican, is opposed by County Treasurer Jack E. McCool, also a Republican.

Local Teachers Named to Help In RIMC Goals

Several Warren County teachers have been named to the subject committees formed to establish long-range goals for the Northwest Regional Instructional Materials Center at Edinboro State College for next year.

The initial meeting in the program will be held at Edinboro State College on Friday, March 17. Registration is from 1 to 1:30 p.m. in the Compton Campus School.

Members in the meantime have been asked to collect ideas and catalogs that will help in deciding what types of materials should be stocked by the Center, which serves Erie, Warren and Crawford counties. Committee members have been asked to consider materials that can be loaned on a weekly basis to individual teachers; consider materials that will make learning easier by motivation, by depth study, or by any other means; and to discuss possible instructional materials which should be made available.

Warren County teachers who have been asked to serve include: art, Norman Perry, Beatty Junior High, and James Hill, Market St. Elementary; business education, Geraldine Hagberg, Eisenhower, and Harold Landin, consultant, Warren Central Office; foreign language, David Dare, Beatty, and Paul Mutzabaugh, Market st.; guidance, Robert Glarner, Eisenhower, Charles Anderson, consultant, Warren.

Health, physical education and safety, Harold Miller, Warren High; homemaking, Daphne Chase, Warren High; language arts, June Anderson, Warren High; Verna Schuler, Lacy Elementary; Margaret Lombard, Beatty; mathematics, Norman Sampson, Warren High; music, Harry Summers, South St.; social studies, Robert Fey, Warren High, Larry Mong, Market st.

litan, No Democrats turned out for the post, Rice is seeking re-election and McCool cannot succeed himself in his present office. Four years ago Rice won out over John H. Stewart and Gurney R. Ball in the primary election and downed Democrat, Tom Conway, in the general election.

McCool in the last primary ran against Wyllis V. Johnson, Ralph Dyke and Bill Simonsen Sr.

There is also a race in both parties for the county treasurer's job. Deputy treasurer Florence C. Hoffman and Peace Justice Frederick A. Barry have filed under the GOP banner while Democrats Don Armagost and John F. Fago have announced their intentions.

Incumbent auditors Russell F. Dietsch and Ray A. Niver are asking the Republican nomination for re-election with Henry D. Preston also a candidate. Democrat incumbent auditor Ralph N. Summerton is unopposed.

Republican jury commissioner Wilma J. Toner and Democrat Marie L. Weaver are also unopposed in their bid for re-election.

AND HERE IS A THOUGHT PROVOKING PROJECT if I ever heard of one. Would you like to share your home with an interracial child from the city this summer? The program planning board of the Warren YWCA is sponsoring vacations for children from inner city neighborhoods of Cleveland from June 29th through July 9th. The project is under the auspices of the Cleveland Inner City Protestant Parish's "Friendly Town" program. And is, if I may add, a way to demonstrate real "brotherhood" in action. Its aim is to provide inner city children the opportunity to broaden their experience by sharing family life in suburban and country settings. Those who volunteer for this project may be able to extend the warmth and love of their family life to the young visitor—some of whom may come from well-organized families, but many do not. The project has been conducted for thirteen years by the Cleveland Inner City Protestant Parish, which selects youngsters in the age range of 6 to 12 years, from families in the crowded neighborhoods to which it ministers. The children, it goes without saying, consider "Friendly Town" a real treat and take home with them excited reports of their experiences. For more information call the YWCA at 723-6350, or Mrs. Donald Davis at 723-5899, area chairman for the challenging project.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read with interest the tragic and hilarious expressions both for and against the Wall Street Warriors. No one came up with an answer. Not even the great Ann Landers.

I have a practical solution for money-hungry egomaniacs who are too tired for love. I hope that you have enough courage to print it. Today we have Medicare, and here in Wisconsin we are trying Judicare — a plan which entitles the underprivileged to legal aid.

Why not set up a government-supported agency called Sexicare? This agency could relieve the tensions of the overworked husband and the under-loved wife. Sexicare would be looked upon not as recreation, but as a mental measure. Preventive medicine, if you please. No emotional involvement, no guilt, no broken marriages with half-orphaned children and the murderous alimony hook. Just instant relief for the needy.

With someone like you behind the program, Ann Landers, it would be an overnight success. — FRIEND OF MANKIND

DEAR FRIEND: When you get a congressman to sponsor this phony bill, let me know. And THEN we'll talk.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the man who is now 55 and has never enjoyed life because he has always been worried about dying. He blames his father (who was a hypochondriac) and will continue to blame him as long as he lives.

Please, Ann Landers, tell people to quit blaming their parents for their inadequacies and failures. Tell them to accept responsibility for themselves. Most parents make mistakes simply because they are ignorant or fearful. If outside help is needed to face life, people ought to drag their carcasses to the nearest psychiatrist and begin the struggle for maturity and self-understanding.

To sit around and blame one's parents for 55 years is nonsense. Pass this word, will you please? — GROWN UP

DEAR UP: Consider it passed. And now may I add a word of my own? We are all the products of our upbringing, but thousands of people rise above poor upbringing and they achieve splendid victories against tremendous odds. If you don't believe me, just look around.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please do a million mothers a favor and print something to make American fathers get up during the night when a new baby needs attention.

My husband is very helpful until bedtime, but once he turns in for the night he refuses to get up for anything.

When my last baby was born, my obstetrician told me to take it easy for three weeks. I asked my husband to give the baby her 4:00 A.M. bottle and he said, "I need my rest at night. You can nap during the day!"

How about an assist from you, Ann Landers? — EXHAUSTED MOM

DEAR EXHAUSTED: I'll be in your corner — for three weeks after you come home from the hospital. After that I'm going into your husband's corner.

Some husbands are living dolls about getting up at night — and lucky is the wife whose husband is a willing nocturnal helper. But a woman CAN nap during the day-time if she must. If a man needs an uninterrupted night's sleep to function properly, he should have it.

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What to Expect from Marriage," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Escorted on the arm of her father, the bride approached the altar in an heirloom dress of white batiste and lace. Upon her head was a mantilla, its long folds flowing into a graceful train. She carried a bouquet of white tulips.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Delmar Lantz, sister of the groom, who wore a gown of yellow organdy. Bridesmaids were Miss Jean Williams, sister of the bride, and Miss Donna Coddington, cousin of the bride, wearing identical gowns of yellow with Dior headbows. All carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums.

Chautauqua Arts And Drama Teacher Speaker At Woman's Club

William A. McCreary, teacher of art and drama at Chautauqua Central School, was the guest entertainer at the meeting of the Literature Department of the Woman's Club on Monday afternoon.

Taking as his subject, "Leacock's Levitous Lending Library," the speaker outlined briefly the biography of Stephen Leacock and presented some examples of his inexhaustible humor, as evidenced in ordinary occurrences of everyday living.

Stephen Leacock, often called the most popular humorist since Mark Twain, was born in Swanmoor, Hampshire, England, in 1869. With his parents and three brothers, he came to Canada where his father worked as a farmer in Ontario.

Graduating from Upper Canada College in Toronto, young Stephen Leacock became a teacher at twenty-two years of age. Later he became a professor at McGill University, Montreal, and head of the Economics Department.

Leacock wrote, "To write something out of one's own mind, worth reading for its own sake is an arduous contrivance, only to be achieved in fortunate moments, few and far between. Personally I would rather have written Alice in Wonderland than the whole Encyclopedia Britannica.

Mr. McCreary read "My Financial Career" and "The Guido of Ghent" by Leacock, and then turning to two more recent writers, he read "The Noblest Instrument" by Clarence Day and "The Fifty-First Dragon" by Heywood Brown.

In a brief business meeting Mrs. Lloyd Smith, chairman, read the nominating committee's report for 1967-68, which resulted in the election of Mrs. Maurice J. Hoke as chairman, Mrs. Lawrence Sowles as vice-chairman, and Mrs. Myron E. Jewell as secretary.

Fifty-three members attended the luncheon, which preceded the program. St. Patrick's Day decorations, planned by Mrs. Shirl Glass, chairman, featured pasteboard shamrocks and plastic pipes placed on the long table at intervals between three lovely bouquets of white chrysanthemums, green-tinted gladioli, and silk shamrocks. A large St. Patrick's hat occupied a prominent place above the mantle on which stood several copies of Leacock's books.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

For mothers with small babies:

Plastic bags that come on men's shirts from the laundry are just perfect to put over tiny dresses and seldom-worn little boys' suits when hanging them in the closet.

Cut a hole in the middle of the closed end and slip the top of baby's hanger through it.

The bag is long enough to cover the entire article. Jerry pierced ears:

Try keeping track of those earrings by sticking them through large buttons. I clamp each pair on one button and they are always together.

This idea has kept my ear-ring tray in order.

Jessie McWilliams

LETTER OF LOVE

DEAR HELOISE:

My parents had a wonderful remedy for bringing a smile to our faces if we were crying long after we had been hurt or scared.

They would get a spoon and tell us our tears were so beautiful that they wanted to catch them and save them.

In a matter of seconds, we'd be laughing at the idea and couldn't produce another tear if we had wanted to.

The Halls Of Ivy

The bidding:
South West North East
1♥ 1♠ 3♥ 3♠
4♦ Pass 5♣ Pass
6♥ Pass Pass

A choice of leads against a slam contract led to a substantial swing when the above hand was dealt in a recent team of four match.

The auction was similar at both tables. South opened with one heart and West made a distributional overcall of one spade. North's holding was worth 14 points in support of partner, and he was fully warranted in giving South a jump raise to three hearts. East's competitive bid of three spades laid the groundwork for a possible sacrifice against the opponent's eventual contract.

South's four-diamond call was a slam try and tho this bid would normally announce first-round control of the suit [inasmuch as hearts is the agreed trump], he did not want to get beyond the game level unnecessarily.

When North accepted partner's invitation by cue bidding the ace of clubs and thereby relieving South of his only concern, the latter proceeded directly to six hearts. West was willing to take his chances on defense, so he passed and East went along with his wishes.

At one table, West opened the three of spades and South won the trick with the ace. In the interests of safety, declarer did not bother with a finesse in trump. Instead he played the ace and another heart, conceding a trick to the king. Declarer had all the rest, announcing that he would discard three clubs from dummy on his long diamonds and eventually ruff out his remaining club.

At the other table, West was not optimistic about the prospects for cashing a spade trick. Partner obviously had length in spades and declarer appeared to be well prepared for an attack in that direction. West decided that the club suit offered the best chance. Altho North was marked with the ace, there was a chance that East had the queen.

The four of clubs was opened and the ace was played from dummy. South was unable to run his diamonds until trumps were drawn, so he led the queen of hearts for a finesse. West produced the king of hearts followed by the king of clubs to defeat the slam. The 50-point profit added to the 980 points scored by his teammates at the other table for making six hearts, produced a 1,030 net gain on the deal.

HUNTING-SEASON WIDOW

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "Lost one husband named Thad, ole bird dog, $5,000 worth of hunting equipment, dirty Buick. Missing since hunting season opened. If found, I'll sell shotguns, ammunition, dog, and possibly husband cheap," said the ad in the Kansas City Star.

Mrs. Janet May simply signed the ad with her first name, omitting her address and telephone number, so the only responses were from acquaintances. Although she received no cash offers, she did receive tentative offers of trades.

"It's been a blast; real fun," she said. "It helped while away the time while Thad was away hunting."

Two St. Marys Men Seek County Office

RIDGWAY — Two late candidates for county offices announced here this week. Roman N. (Sleepy) Stebich has announced his candidacy for sheriff on the Democratic ticket. Columbus Has School Problems

Columbus schools are having financial problems, according to the Corry Evening Journal, which reports "the Columbus School Board met Monday night but had little in the way of encouraging news," continuing in part as follows:

"The board heard a report from Secretary Louis Ball that the cash balance at the end of February stood at $2,724, and after this announcement, Board members voted to pay a total of $2,635 in bills—$2,450 for transportation, $25 to solicitor Frank McKnight and $160 for library books.

"A monthly payment to the Corry Area Jointure of $18,193 cannot be met until routine state reimbursement checks are received.

On the plus side, however, was one item which came out at the meeting. The Board has coming hundreds of dollars state reimbursement for extra transportation costs touched off by the 1964 high school fire.

"After the fire, the school went into a two-shift program which meant added bus runs with students for which the state must make reimbursement. Ball said the money is "coming" but there is no indication just when.

"Ball also told the Board that the Columbus school cafeteria is $437 in the hole with three months of school still to go. This is not unusual in the Jointure and much of the loss stems from a cutback of surplus food items which, for years, bolstered the finances of school cafeterias."

$225 Damage In Accident

Borough police were called to the scene of a two-car traffic mishap at 7:29 p.m. Tuesday on Pennsylvania ave.

Property damage was estimated to total $225. Police said a car driven by Stanley J. Schwartz, 117 Mohawk ave., Warren, traveling east on Pennsylvania ave., turned into the Red Barn parking lot and was struck by a westbound car operated by James A. Kramer, of 1014 Spring st., Warren. Kramer told police the Schwartz vehicle pulled in front of him. No charges were filed, according to the police report.

Corry Moves To Provide Low-Rent Housing

CORRY — The worsening picture of the need for low-rental housing here may have reached the point at which genuine progress is in the offing.

At least City Council Monday night passed a resolution which sets the stage for progress. The city fathers were prompted to move by letters from the Corry Area Industrial Development Corporation and Aero-Flow Dynamics Inc.

The letters indicated that the need for housing in the low-rental bracket is sharply pointed up by the fact that the local office of the Pennsylvania State Employment Service has a backlog of 100 unfilled jobs and that this situation cannot be resolved, the people cannot be brought here to fill the jobs, unless they can find houses.

The CAIDC letter, signed by S. A. Long, secretary of the organization, stated at one point that providing housing aimed at bringing the 100 vacant jobs would be the equivalent of CAIDC bringing in an entire new plant offering 100 new jobs.

McClelland Is Assured Full Term

ERIE — Unanimous State Senate approval of the interim appointment of Lindley R. McClelland as an Erie County judge was voted at Harrisburg Tuesday.

The action virtually assures the new judge a full 10-year term on the bench as no other candidate had filed for the post before the 5 p. m. deadline on Tuesday.

McClelland, district attorney since January 1966, will be sworn in as interim judge on March 17, succeeding Judge Elmer L. Evans who retired Jan. 15.

Richard F. Brabender, first assistant district attorney, is slated to succeed McClelland as district attorney to serve for the remainder of 1967.

Will Participate

Dr. Leland H. Bull, Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture, has been invited to participate in the North American Conference on bird damage affecting agriculture. The conference will be held March 30 and 31 in Columbus, Ohio.
